Attention keepers of ancient technology flames (the metaphorical, not the rude internet kinds):

I've recommended to the list several times before Rainy Day Books in Fitzwilliam, New Hampshire as a rich source of boatanchor type books.
Well, to anyone who might be in the area next weekend, be advised that they are holding their annual "Round the Mountain" (as in Monadnock) book sale from Thursday, April 3, through Sunday, April 6, which I've made some major "finds" there, and it is definitely worth your checking out. In addition to electronics and radio books, they have lots of titles in other engineering disciplines, broadcasting, railroading, juveniles, and nostalgia (this is the place I got my various Alfred Morgan "Boys' Books").

The "early bird definitely gets the worm" at this sale as the place is usually "mobbed", so get there early if you want to make the good "finds".

Mike Burke, Unrepentant Bibliophile

I'm not an agent of Rainy Day Books, just a very satisfied customer.

I forgot to mention that Frank Bequaert of Rainy Day Books is the author (under the pseudonym, Stan Dryer) of "The Antique Radio Boys and the Garrulous Grebe", and has lots of signed copies to sell!

73, Mike
